An alternative sanction program managed by WCSO.

SHERIFF
WASHINGTON COUNTY

The Electronic Home Detention (EHD)

Program is an offender-funded alternative sanction program that allows low-risk adults in custody (AIC) to serve part or all of a jail sentence at home, making more space available in our jail for AICs who pose a greater threat to our community. This program also allows AICs to simultaneously work and attend school, medical appointments, and drug, alcohol, and mental health treatment.

While on EHD, AICs wear an ankle bracelet that allows jail staff to track their movements in the community using GPS technology. Participants must have a pre-arranged weekly schedule and must remain within a 50-mile radius of the Washington County Jail.

Participants are subject to random home visits and cannot live with anyone who is on parole or probation, or with one of their victims. All weapons, alcohol, and illegal drugs must be removed from the residence, and all adults must consent in writing to searches by law enforcement before the AIC starts the program.

Eligibility

Selection for EHD is not automatic and applicants must meet stringent eligibility requirements.

Participation in this program is a privilege that can be revoked at any time due to negative behavior, rule violations, or inability to pay required fees. If revoked, AICs will be returned to jail.

For a full list of eligibility requirements and automatic disqualifiers, visit the EHD page on the Washington County Sheriff's Office website: https://bit.ly/WCSO_EHD

Program Costs

Program participants are required to wear and maintain a GPS tracking device and carry a mandatory alcohol breathalyzer to provide four pre-scheduled tests per day. AICs are responsible for covering a portion of the equipment and monitoring expenses based on participants' income.

Application Process

There is no application fee, and interested participants can fill out an application and return it to the program via email jailEHD@washingtoncountyor.gov or in person at the Washington County Jail, 215 SW Adams Ave, Hillsboro, OR 97123.
